

TWO CENTS IS PRICE NAMED

Assembly Passes This Senate Bill With An Amendment After A Heated Debate.

IS BACK INTO THE SENATE AGAIN

This Body May Not Have A Quorum When The Question Is Brought Back-Question Is One Which Excites Both Houses.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., July 11.—The assembly after a strenuous debate of over two hours concurred in the senate a substitute for the two cent fare bill by a vote of 29 to 25.

Hot Debate.
The debate was one of the hottest of the entire session. Arguments for standing by the action of the railroad commission were delivered into deaf ears and even the presence of an amendment did not help to clarify the situation.

The Amendment.
An amendment was added to eliminate a clause which permits the charging of 3 cents a mile if passengers are on board trains without a ticket. The vote on the amendment was 31 to 24, the opposition coming from those who feared to let the bill go back to the senate again with any amendments.

May Lack Quorum.
There may not be a quorum in the senate which will demand a reconsideration of the vote on the amendment before the bill becomes a law.

Will Give Aid.
A resolution came into the assembly to permit Mr. Jones to introduce a bill for the appropriation of $10,000 for the relief of the victims of the recent storms in Juneau, Clark, Jackson, Erin, Lake and Sauk counties.

ENDEAVORERS BUSY EVERY HOUR OF DAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Seattle, Wash., July 11.—Christian Endeavor delegates and visitors held "quiet hour" services in four city churches at 6:30 o'clock this morning. The services were attended by hundreds of delegates although they had been occupied until late last night with convention business. One of the auditoriums was given over this afternoon to a session devoted to the Junior Endeavorers, President Clark presiding. In the second auditorium a "Union Workers Rally" takes place with features of special interest to the field secretaries and other officials of the Christian Endeavor organizations. Two interesting programs have been arranged for the auditorium meetings tonight, the prominent speakers to include President George M. Ward of Wells College, Rev. Hugh K. Walker of Los Angeles, Rev. W. T. McElveen of Boston, Rev. Floyd W. Tomkins of Philadelphia, and Dr. Herbert L. Willett of the University of Chicago.

MORE OF ORCHARD'S TESTIMONY DENIED

Moyer Denies That Miners' Federation Sent Draft to Jack Simpkins, Prior to Steunenberg's Death.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Boise, Idaho, July 11.—Charles H. Moyer was called to the stand for a cross-examination in the Haywood case when the court met this morning. After the defense had secured the introduction as evidence of a portion of the ritual and constitution of the Western Federation of Miners, Moyer was passed over into the hands of the prosecution for cross-examination. Senator Borah began a searching inquiry of the witness. The most important statement of the witness was a denial of any knowledge of a draft for $100 sent to Jack Simpkins nine days before Steunenberg was killed.

Haywood was called to the stand to testify in his own behalf immediately after the court opened this afternoon.

NEW LAWS TURN THINGS TOPSY-TURVY IN TEXAS

Stringent Legislation Will Drive Every Foreign Insurance Company Out Of State—Nine-Foot Bed Sheet Required.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Austin, Texas, July 11.—Laws that are calculated to turn things in the Lone Star State more or less topsy-turvy for the time being will come into operation at midnight tonight.

The new law of which the country at large has probably heard the most is the Robertson act, which requires foreign insurance companies doing business in Texas to deposit 75 per cent of the reserves on Texas business in state depositories. It also requires a tax of 1 per cent on gross premiums collected. As a result of this law two-thirds of the big insurance companies doing business in Texas have already withdrawn from the state and the rest will probably do likewise before December 31, on which date the first investment and deposit required by the law must be made.

Several other new laws are of a more or less radical nature and have attracted widespread attention. One of these is an anti-pass law and another places more stringent regulations on the sale of liquor in Texas. Still another requires that all proprietors of hotels, sleeping cars and other places for the accommodation of the traveling public shall furnish top sheets not less than nine feet in length and provides a penalty for failure to comply with the law.

The new law for the regulation of the liquor traffic, known as the Baskin-McGregor act, requires every liquor dealer in the state, whether wholesale or retail, to take out a new license. The new licenses are to be issued only to persons of good character, who have resided for more than two years in the county where the application is made, who have never had a license revoked or forfeited and who have never been convicted of a felony.

The anti-pass law practically revokes the free railroad pass system throughout Texas. Even the Stato Railroad Commission will have to pay railroad fares, as the new law cuts off all passes for the commissioners and employees of that body. All of the railroads of the state have sent out requests to holders of annual passes and millions asking that such transportation be returned to the general office for cancellation.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

The meeting will be attended by the federal officials as well as the pure food and dairy commissioners of nearly all the states of the union. Among the subjects to be discussed with a view to final recommendations where additional legislation is needed, or final action where present laws are sufficient, are the following: "Closer restriction and prohibition of artificial color, which, whether harmful or harmless, is the cloak of most food frauds; problems of sanitation in production; preparation, transportation and marketing; the city milk supply; the unspectated local slaughtering house, bake shop, soda fountain and ice cream plant; co-operation between the state and municipal authorities, and between the states and federal government; uniform legislation, based upon the combined best in the state and national laws, and not on any imperfections which may have been influenced into either; the continuance of the joint committee from the official agricultural chemists and from official food analysts to collaborate the research of scientists and the experiences of producers and manufacturers for the mutual information of both the food officials and manufacturers."

The paper says "We cannot help feeling some misgivings with regard to the significance of the intended missing of the American warships in the Pacific, but we are not disposed to attach any serious importance to this matter, and have no inclination to doubt the president's sincerity in assuring the peaceful nature of the proposed maneuvers. Neither have we the slightest doubt of the Pacific and friendly sentiments of the American government."

GENUINE WORK OF THE CONVENTION

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS SHOW PRACTICAL RESULTS.

IT IS NOT THEORETICAL

Meetings Full of Interest to the Delegates and the Prominent Men Who Speak.

There is an interesting convention of the Wisconsin Sunday School Association holding sessions at the Carroll Memorial Church this week. The hundred and twenty earnest workers in Sunday Schools throughout the state are showing practical rather than theoretical ideas as to the conduct of church Sunday School that bring the best results. Professor Charles Treat stated this last evening in opening address at a most interesting gathering of true and conscious workers in this wonderful labor.
 The program for the evening opened with a praise service conducted by Rev. C. A. Broughton, which was followed by an address by Marshall A.

Hudson of Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Hudson is the founder of the Baraca Classes and his subject was the Baraca-Philathea Movement.

Opening Exercises
 Mrs. W. J. Semelroth and Mr.
 Broughton sang and Rev. Manning of Kaukauna led in prayer. Mr. Hudson followed with a most interesting

address. He spoke on the Baraca
 class and its work, its ideas and what it has accomplished. Mr. Hudson is a prosperous businessman and has interested himself in this work so that
 the young men of the church may be brought into active service in the churches and Sunday Schools. Today
 hundreds of these classes are in existence all over the United States.
 Over six thousand men have been converted through the work of the Bara-
 ca classes.

The Beginning
 Mr. Hudson told in a quiet convin-

address. He spoke on the Baraca

class and its work, its ideas and what

it has accomplished. Mr. Hudson is

a prosperous businessman and has interested himself in this work so that

the young men of the church may be

brought into active service in the

churches and Sunday Schools. Today

hundreds of these classes are in existence all over the United States.

Over six thousand men have been converted through the work of the Bara-

ca classes.

The Beginning

Mr. Hudson told in a quiet convin-

MRS. W. J. SEMELROTH

ing manner the manner in which the first Baraca class was organized; that the work of the

Baraca

there were but two hundred members of the Sunday school in his church at that time and that now they number over a thousand, and that the membership of the church itself has grown from two hundred and fifty to eleven hundred. Mr. Hudson explained the problems that confront the formation and work of these classes and how they have been overcome. He is a strong speaker and his talk was most convincing to his hearers, many of whom are members of the class at the Baptist church in this city.

Hon. Charles Alling

Following a hymn, Hon. Charles

Alling, Jr. of Chicago spoke on Citizenship in the Sunday School. Mr.

Alling has been an alderman in the Chicago council and speaks from experience. He became an alderman in 1897 and found the dishonest element in control. Today two-thirds of the council are men who stand for the right. Lincoln Steffens, the writer, says in his articles that today Chicago has a board of aldermen who are aldermen of the present members of the council who are Christian workers and urged that more church members enter politics for the benefit of the cities and villages they live in.

The Park System

Mr. Alling is an advocate of the small park system. He believes it gives the young people an opportunity to play, to enjoy life as they should. Public bathing houses were also advocated. He believed that the members of the council and the Mayor of all cities would be strengthened by the prayers of the church people.

Hon. to Number One

All honor to the wide-awake

Baptist pastor at Almond. The Silver

League plan was first presented by the general secretary in the Portage convention at Almond, June 4-5, 1907. It was promptly inaugurated, under the leadership of Rev. U. E. Gibson, who took the first pledge card, No. 1. This action will become famous, for the plan will be an historic success. Mr. Gibson at once saw the good points of the scheme and his example was inspiring to others. To this company of five faithful leaders in Portage county will always belong the honor of inaugurating the Silver League plan of support in Wisconsin. The others who promptly took the pledge card

were Miss Edith M. Palmer, Mrs. S.

J. Hill, Dr. Carrie A. Frost and M.

E. Heisel. Just as was intended and expected, these pledges amounting to $55; the convention voted to pledge

$100 to the state association at Janesville, their pledge last year being ten dollars. A good example for the counties of the entire state.

KICKERS' KOLUM

Editor of Janesville Gazette: No one can deny that your picture of the chaotic condition of the sidewalks, as set forth in an editorial, is a true

one. But the blame rests not with the city engineer, but with the members of a city council who persistently subvert public policy to the wishes of individual constituents. Your example of the projected Third ward walk which would have covered half of the basement windows of a factory-building serves as an illustration. The grade calling for the high walk which the engineer established there was no new discovery. It had been fixed at least fifty years and the parties who were careless enough to erect a structure with windows under the sidewalk line had no just cause for demanding

NO COMPLAINTS AGAINST TRUST

DEALERS AND GROWERS HAVE NOT SUFFERED BY OPERATIONS.

LOCAL BUYERS INTERVIEWED

What Effect Dissolution of Combine Would Have on Market Is Difficult to Predict.

Should the federal government succeed in dissolving the so-called tobacco trust, now that Assistant Attorney General McReynolds has commenced suits under the Sherman anti-trust act against various companies in the combine, it is difficult to predict what the effect would be in Wisconsin, where hundreds of acres of cigar tobacco are grown, jobbed and to an extent manufactured. Janesville, Edgerton, Milton Junction, Evansville and Brodhead, each with a number of leaf warehouses, will watch the proceedings closely. The rural districts are also greatly interested for the tobacco acreage of Rock county is large.

Leaf Market Unaffected.

Local warehousemen were interviewed today on the matter and though loath to make any predictions seemed to hold different opinions.

L. B. Carle and son, Norman L. Carle, agreed that the presence of trust agencies in Wisconsin did not materially affect the leaf market of Wisconsin. The competition between the American Cigar company and the independents, they said, was fair, healthy and even beneficial. "The American's agents," continued Mr. L. B. Carle, "are honest, upright, gentlemanly businessmen and we like to deal with them. The trust's representatives that come here from the east are also first-class men. They never endeavor to freeze out competitive buyers or hammer down prices."

"Is there no truth then to the dispatch from Edgerton to the effect that in 1891 the trust endeavored to corner the Wisconsin crop by paying high prices?" was asked.

"Any such report is erroneous," replied Mr. Carle. "Two Vernon county buyers, who had always controlled Vernon county market tried to keep the trust from entering that field. They paid high prices and the American followed the would-be monopolists and remained in the field."

"No," he said further, "we independent dealers have no objections to the trust. They have never injured us. Their unfair operations have been confined largely to the sale of manufactured chewing and smoking tobacco. They have bought out many big manufacturers and raised havoc with both the wholesale and retail dealers of finished products."

Rumrill Predicts Panic.

George H. Rumrill, another big dealer in leaf, was asked what the result would be in Wisconsin if the federal government dissolved the trust. "I believe there would be a small panic if the trust's holdings were suddenly thrown upon the market prices would drop to almost nothing."

"Mr. F. Greene, of M. F. Greene & Sons, said: 'I am no more competent to forecast the result than would any Janesville merchant be able to tell how a similar investigation would affect the product he handles, but I believe if the combine was broken up hundreds of small stockholders would lose heavily.'

"If the government only fines the trust officers the present suits will be only high-producers. A hundred thousand dollar fine sounds large, but it means nothing to a corporation capitalized at a hundred million. The recent conviction of the Horioce trust was only a farce for the penalty was paid by the tobacco trust, in which the Horioce manufacturers are members. Prison sentences, however, would be effective. They would drive the trust from the face of the earth."

Small Cigar-makers Safe.

"The trust has driven the small men entirely out of the plug and smoking tobacco business and is endeavoring to get control of the cigar trade. When ever a brand of cigars becomes popular the trust buys out the manufacturer, deteriorates the brand and subsequently discontinues its manufacture, substituting their own make. For many years we jobbed a brand that was very popular in all towns where there were no local makers. The trust purchased the factory where this cigar was made and allowed their own shops to make the brand. Of course our trade dropped off when the consumers recognized the difference in the cigars and we no longer handle that brand. However, the trust cannot drive out the small cigar-makers as they have the plug and smoking tobacco men. Expensive machinery is needed for making plug and smoking but only a table and knife, costing at the most ten dollars, is needed to make cigars."

WILL CASE WITH MANY WITNESSES

Heirs of Late Ralph Bleasdale, Sr., Contest Claims of Heirs of Late Ralph Bleasdale, Jr.

Over a score of witnesses from the town of Janesville are testifying before Judge Sale in county court in the matter of a petition for a construction of the will of the late Ralph Bleasdale, Sr., who died in 1880. By the terms of this testament the deceased appears to have left his wife the 100-acre farm during her lifetime, with the provision that at her death each of the four sons was to have one of the 40-acre tracts, the homestead forty to go to Ralph Bleasdale, Jr., on condition that he should have taken care of it properly—kept the buildings up, etc. Ralph Bleasdale, Jr., who was married and had several children, died last November and his mother passed away last January. The heirs of Ralph Bleasdale, Jr., lay claim to the homestead forty, while two of the sons contest this claim on the grounds that during his lifetime the prospective beneficiary did not conform with the provisions of the will. Atty. William Dougherty represents the heirs of the late Ralph Bleasdale, Jr.; Atty. A. B. Matheson, the estate of the late Ralph Bleasdale, Sr.; Atty. Arthur Fisher, the estate of Ralph Bleasdale, Jr.; and Atty. Louis Avery, the creditors of Ralph Bleasdale, Jr.

DEAD MAN WAS WM. STRICKER

RAILROAD TRACK MYSTERY PARTIALLY CLEARED UP TODAY.

EMPLOYED AT UNION HOUSE

But Left on Wednesday to Work on Farm Near Lima—Family Resides in Edgerton.

Members of one of the C. & M. & St. P. Ry. Co. train crews which arrived in Janesville last evening reported that they had seen the body of a man lying face downward in a pool of water not far from the tracks at a point along the right-of-way between Milton and Lima, and a mile and a quarter west of the last named place. District Attorney J. L. Fisher was notified and sent directions to Undertaker Kelly of Milton to care for the remains. With the aid of a section crew the latter removed them to the place belows hall in Lima, where the justice of the peace, without any semblance of authority or permission of the district attorney, held an inquest early this morning.

Accompanied by Undersheriff George Appleby and Officer John Brown, Mr. Fisher visited the scene and made a careful investigation this forenoon.

Death by Strangulation.

Though the body showed some discolorations from bruises on the nose, top of the head, and arms, there was nothing to indicate that the man had been struck by or thrown off a train or in any way foully dealt with. The accepted theory was that he had fallen in a fit and met death by strangulation in the water. And this conjecture is given considerable color by the statement of Undertaker Kelly that the body was still warm when he pulled it out of the puddle.

Description of Man.

The man appeared to weigh about 135 pounds. He was dark complexioned, partially bald with light forelock, and wore a sandy, close-cropped mustache. He was attired in blue overalls, wore a straw hat with the initials "O. E. M." and the T. J. Ziegler & Co. store's trademark in the lining, and was shod with a pair of shoes which were not mates and one of which was stuffed with hay. A blue and green check necktie from the Golden Eagle store, two checks on the McLaughlin saloon which ceased doing business at Edgerton six years ago, and a one-dollar bill, were among his effects.

Identified by W. C. English.

It was not until late this afternoon that the identification of the dead man could be established. W. C. English, proprietor of the Empire Hotel, recognized him as William Stricker, who was at one time employed at the Union House. Landlord G. S. Walrath of the latter hostelry was called on upon his arrival confirmed Mr. English's statement. He said that Stricker had been in town recently for about six months, off and on, and had left the hotel with a bundle of clothes, Wednesday morning, to go to the farm of Mrs. Myers, near Lima, where he had obtained employment at $25 a month. It was further learned that the dead man had a family consisting of a wife, three sons, and a daughter, who formerly lived here but all of whom, with one exception, moved to Edgerton some years ago. The exception was Otto Stricker who is employed at the Delaney & Murphy cigar factory. When inquiry was made for the latter it was learned that he had gone to Edgerton to spend his vacation.

Forty-seven Years Old.

William Stricker was born in Germany and was forty-seven years of age. He was addicted to the use of strong drink and had so idly provided for his family in later years that they no longer depended upon him.

LOCAL LACONICS.

An Unwelcome Summer Visitor.

Evening Wisconsin: The dreaded "green bug" which is reported as having appeared in northern Illinois, close to the Wisconsin state line, will doubtless pay Badger farmers a more or less destructive visit. Wherever it has shown itself, there has been damage to the crops amounting almost to ruin, and its progress through the county is therefore a matter of much concern to agriculturists.

To Sign Contracts: L. L. Hilton, of the architect firm of Hilton & Sadler of this city, went to Milwaukee this morning to sign the contracts for the hospital, dining hall, and toilet buildings, to be erected on the state fair grounds, that were verbally let by the board of directors of the state fair association with whom he met in Milwaukee Tuesday.

As The Years Roll On

The memorial which should mark the resting place of some beloved one is yet to be erected.

Of course you intend to have it done—and you will—but this is a matter in which we are all peculiarly liable to procrastinate.

A suitable monument or headstone is the last mark of respect and affection we can pay to the memory of the departed.

It isn't necessary that it be costly or elaborate, but it IS fitting that we do not neglect or delay to place a memorial that will last for all time.

If you have been putting off this matter until you could better afford it, or for any other reason, we suggest that we can furnish an appropriate memorial of whatever style and design you desire at a much lower price than you may have expected to pay.

We will gladly show you our designs and furnish estimates free.

Come With Us To Alberta.

Stock raising is the most profitable and satisfactory branch of farming. The IDEAL grazing and stock region in Southern Alberta, Canada. Climate and weather conditions are so favorable that stock is kept on the range all winter and no expensive stables are needed—shed feeding is all that is necessary.

The snowfall is much lighter than in Wisconsin, and the grasses furnish feed for the stock all winter. Alfalfa, the best all-round forage plant, grows thickly and luxuriantly year in and year out. Once rooted, it lasts a lifetime, and you may harvest two or three crops a year. Good alfalfa land, under irrigation, you can buy for $15.00 to $25.00 per acre.

But stock raising is far from being the only profitable purpose to which this fertile land may be put. The most desirable conditions are to be found in Southern Alberta for farming of all kinds. Alberta is YOUR opportunity. It has ALL of the advantages and NONE of the drawbacks of the most fertile farming regions in the United States.

Read what the most thoroughly posted and most competent grain man in the northwest has just written:

"I have been vitally interested in the crops of the Northwest States for the past 15 years and never in all of my experience have I seen such crops anywhere in any country as we have here in Alberta at the present time. Conditions could not possibly have been better had they been made to order. The winter wheat crop is especially fine and promising. This does not apply to any one district in Alberta but to the entire area."

Maps, literature, and further information can be had by addressing us at any time.

Our next excursion to these Southern Alberta lands will be Tuesday, July 16th. If you are looking for a real opportunity be sure to call on us and arrange to make the trip with us. Just let us know you are interested and we will supply you with all the details.

THE LION AND THE MOUSE.

By CHARLES KLEIN.

A Story of American Life Novelized From the Play by ARTHUR HORNBLLOW.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY.

In his experience such waves of reform were periodical and soon wear themselves out, when things go on as just as they did before. Much of the agitation doubtless was a strike for graft. They would have to go down in their pockets, he supposed, and these yellow newspapers and these yellow magazines that were barking at their heels would let them go. But in regard to the particular case now at issue—this Anburdale decision—there had been no way of preventing it. Influence had been used, but to no effect. The thing to do now was to prevent any such disasters in future by removing the author of them.

The directors bent eagerly forward. Had Ryder really got some plan up his sleeve, after all? The faces around the table looked brighter, and the directors cleared their throats and settled themselves down in their chairs as audiences do in the theater when the drama is reaching its climax.

The board, continued Ryder with icy calmness, had perhaps heard and also seen in the newspapers the stories regarding Judge Rossmore and his alleged connection with the Great Northwestern company. Perhaps they had not believed these stories. It was only natural. He had not believed them himself. But he had taken the trouble to inquire into the matter very carefully, and he regretted to say that the stories were true. In fact, they were no longer denied by Judge Rossmore himself.

The directors looked at each other in amazement. Gaspings of astonishment, incredulity, satisfaction, were heard all over the room. The rumors were true, then? Was it possible? Incredible!

Investigation, Ryder went on, had shown that Judge Rossmore was not only interested in the company, in whose favor as judge of the supreme court he had rendered an important decision; but, what was worse, he had accepted from that company a valuable gift—that is, $50,000 worth of stock—for which he had given absolutely nothing in return unless, as some claimed, the weight of his influence on the bench. These facts were very ugly and so nonsensical that Judge Rossmore did not attempt to answer them, and the important news, which he, the chairman, had to announce to his fellow directors that afternoon was that Judge Rossmore's conduct would be made the subject of an inquiry by congress.

Ryder sat down, and pandemonium broke loose, the delighted directors tumbling over each other in their eagerness to shake hands with the man who had saved them. Ryder had given no hint that he had been a factor in the working up of this case against their common enemy, but the directors knew well that he and he alone had been the master mind which had brought about the happy result.

CHAPTER III.

AS the supreme reward of virtue the good American is promised a visit to Paris when he dies.

Those, however, of our sagacious fellow countrymen who can afford to make the trip usually manage to see Lutezia before crossing the river Styx. Most Americans like Paris—some like it so well that they have made it their permanent home—although it must be added that in their admiration they rarely include the Frenchman. For that matter, we are not as a nation particularly fond of any foreigner, largely because we do not understand him, while the foreigner for his part is quite willing to return the compliment. He gives the Yankee credit for commercial smartness, which has built up America's great material prosperity, but he has the utmost contempt for our acquaintance with art and no profound respect for us as scientists.

The logic of this position, set forth in Le Sol in an article on the New World, appealed strongly to Jefferson Ryder as he sat in front of the Cafe de la Paix in Paris, sipping a sugared vermouth. It was 5 o'clock, the magic hour of the aperitif, when the glutton taxes his wits to deceive his stomach and work up an appetite for renewed gorging. The little tables were all occupied with the usual before dinner crowd.

He sat in front of the Cafe de la Paix in Paris.

Fascinated by the gay scene around him, Jefferson laid the newspaper aside. To the young American, fresh from prosaic memory of New York, the City of Pleasure presented indeed not a novel and beautiful spectacle. How different, he mused, from his own city with one fashionable thoroughfare—Fifth avenue—monotonously lined for miles with hideous brownstone residences and showing little real animation except during the Saturday afternoon parade when the activities of the smart set, male and female, centered chiefly in such exciting diversions as going to Huyler's for soda, taking tea at the Waldorf and trying to outdo each other in dress and show. New York certainly was a dull place with all its boasted cosmopolitanism.

It was true, he thought, the foreigner had indeed learned the secret of enjoying life. There was assuredly something else in the world beyond mere money getting. His father was a slave to it, but he would never be. He was resolved on that. Yet, with all his ideas of emancipation and progress, Jefferson was a thoroughly practical young man. He fully understood the value of money, and the possession of it was as sweet to him as to other men. Only he would never sell his soul in acquiring it dishonestly.

No, Jefferson was no fool. He loved money for what pleasure, intellectual or physical, it could give him, but he would never allow money to dominate his life as his father had done. His father, he knew well, was not a happy man; neither happy himself nor respected by the world. He had toiled all his life to make his vast fortune, and now he toiled to take care of it. The galley slave led a life of luxurious ease compared with John Burkett Ryder. Battered by the yellow newspapers and magazines, investigated by state committees, dogged by process servers, haunted by beggars, harassed by blackmailers, threatened by kidnappers, frustrated in his attempts to bestow charity by the cry "tainted money," certainly the lot of the world's richest man was far from being an enviable one.

That is why Jefferson had resolved to strike out for himself. He had wanted off the golden yoke which his father proposed to put on his shoulders, declining, the lucrative position made for him in the Empire Trading company, and he had gone so far as to refuse also the private income his father offered to settle on him. He would earn his own living. A man who has his bread buttered for him seldom accomplishes anything, he had said, and while his father had appeared to be angry at this open opposition to his will, he was secretly pleased at his son's grit. Jefferson was thoroughly in earnest. If needs be he would forego the great fortune that awaited him rather than be forced into questionable business methods against which his whole manhood revolted.

Jefferson Ryder felt strongly about these matters and gave them more thought than would be expected of most young men with his opportunities. In fact, he was unusually serious for his age. He was not yet thirty, but he had done a great deal of reading, and he took a keen interest in all the political and sociological questions of the hour. In personal appearance he was the type of man that both men and women like—tall and athletic looking, with smooth face and clean cut features. He had the steel blue eyes and the fighting jaw of his father, and when he smiled he displayed two even rows of very white teeth. He was popular with men, being manly, frank and cordial in his relations with them, and women admired him greatly, although they were somewhat intimidated by his grave and serious manner. The truth was that he was rather diffident with women, largely owing to lack of experience with them.

He had never felt the slightest inclination for business. He had the artistic temperament strongly developed, and his personal tastes had little in common with Wall street and its feverish stock manipulating. When he was younger he had dreamed of a literary or art career. At one time he had even thought of going on the stage, but it was to art that he turned finally. From an early age he had shown considerable skill as a draftsman, and later a two years' course at the Academy of Design convinced him that this was his true vocation. He had begun by illustrating for the book publishers and for the magazines, meeting at first with the usual rebuffs and disappointments; but, refusing to be discouraged, he had kept on and soon the tide turned. His drawings began to be accepted. They appeared first in one magazine, then in another, until one day, to his great joy, he received an order from an important firm of publishers for six wash drawings to be used in illustrating a famous novel. This was the beginning of his real success. His illustrations were talked about almost as much as the book, and from that time on everything was easy. He was in great demand by the publishers, and very soon the young artist, who had begun his career of independence on nothing a year, so to speak, found himself in a handsomely appointed studio in Bryant park, with more orders coming in than he could possibly fill and enjoying an income of little less than $7,000 a year. The money was all the sweeter to Jefferson in that he felt he had himself earned every cent of it. This summer he was giving himself a well deserved vacation, and he had come to Europe partly to see Paris and the other art centers about which his fellow students at the academy raved, but principally—although this he did not acknowledge even to himself—to meet in Paris a young woman in whom he was more than ordinarily interested—Shirley Rossmore, daughter of Judge Rossmore of the United States supreme court, who had come abroad to recuperate after the labors on her new novel, "The American Octopus," a book which was then the talk of two hemispheres.

Jefferson had read half a dozen reviews of it in as many American papers that afternoon at the New York Herald's reading room in the Avenue de l'Opera, and he chuckled with glee as he thought how accurately this young woman had described his father. The book had been published under the pseudonym "Shirley Green," and he alone had been admitted into the secret of authorship. The critics all conceded that it was the book of the year, and that it portrayed with a pitiless pen the personality of the biggest figure in the commercial life of America. "Although," wrote one reviewer, "the leading character in the book is given another name, there can be no doubt that the author intended to give to the world a vivid pen portrait of John Burkett Ryder. She has succeeded in presenting a remarkable character study of the most remarkable man of his time."

He was particularly pleased with the reviews, not only for Miss Rossmore's sake, but also because his own vanity was gratified. Had he not collaborated on the book to the extent of acquainting the author with details of his father's life and his characteristics which no outsider could possibly have learned? There had been no disloyalty to his father in doing this. Jefferson admired his father's smartness, if he could not approve his methods. He did not consider the book an attack on his father, but rather a powerfully written pen picture of an extraordinary man.

The acquaintance of his son with the daughter of Judge Rossmore had not escaped the eagle eye of Ryder, Sr., and much to the financier's annoyance and even consternation, he had ascertained that Jefferson was a frequent caller at the Rossmore home. He immediately jumped to the conclusion that this could mean only one thing, and fearing what he termed "the consequences of the insanity of immature minds," he had summoned Jefferson peremptorily to his presence. He told his son that all idea of marriage in that quarter was out of the question for two reasons: One was that Judge Rossmore was his most bitter enemy, the other was that he had hoped to see his son, his destined successor, marry a woman of whom he, Ryder, Sr., could approve. He knew of such a woman, one who would make a far more desirable mate than Miss Rossmore. He alluded, of course, to Kate Roberts, the pretty daughter of his old friend, the senator. The family interests would benefit by this alliance, which was desirable from every point of view.

Jefferson had listened respectfully, until his father had finished and then grimly remarked that only one point of view had been overlooked—his own. He did not care for Miss Roberts; he did not think she really cared for him. The marriage was out of the question. Whereupon Ryder, Sr., had fumed and raged, declaring that Jefferson was opposing his will as he always did, and ending with the threat that if his son married Shirley Rossmore without his consent he would disinherit him.

Jefferson was cogitating on these incidents of the last few months when suddenly a feminine voice which he quickly recognized called out in English:

"Hello! Mr. Ryder."

He looked up and saw two ladies, one young, the other middle aged, smiling at him from an open carriage which had drawn up to the curb. Jefferson jumped from his seat, upsetting his chair, and starting two nervous Frenchmen in his hurry, and hastened out, but in hand.

"Why, Miss Rossmore, what are you doing out driving?" he asked. "You know you and Mrs. Blake promised to dine with me tonight. I was coming round to the hotel in a few moments."

Mrs. Blake was a younger sister of Shirley's mother. Her husband had died a few years previously, leaving her a small income, and when she had heard of her niece's contemplated trip to Europe she had decided to come to Paris to meet her and incidentally to chaperone her. The two women were stopping at the Grand Hotel close by, while Jefferson had found accommodations at the Athenae.

Shirley explained. Her aunt wanted to go to the dressmaker's, and she herself was most anxious to go to the Luxembourg Gardens to hear the music. Would he take her? Then they could meet Mrs. Blake at the hotel at 7 o'clock and all go to dinner. Was he willing?

Mrs. Blake said she would get out here. Her dressmaker was close by, in the Rue Audier, and she would walk back to the hotel to meet them at 7 o'clock. Jefferson assisted her to the porte cochere of the modiste's, a couple of doors away. When he returned to the carriage, Shirley had already told the coachman where to go. He got in, and the face started.

"Now," said Shirley, "tell me what you have been doing with yourself all day."

Jefferson was busily arranging the faded carriage rug about Shirley, spending more time in the task perhaps than was absolutely necessary, and she had to repeat the question.

"Doing?" he echoed, with a smile. "I've been doing two things—waiting impatiently for 7 o'clock and incidentally reading the notices of your book."

Dressing Children.

A great saving of time and help to children in dressing may be had by sewing a tape to pass under the foot of knit underwear. It makes it easy for small children to pull on their own stockings and helps older ones dress quickly.

AT FASHION'S SHRINE

As was predicted, the black and white stripe is first favorite among dress goods, especially when it bears a smooth surface, the black being broken by the white, the white clear. One of the prettiest models in this has a kilted skirt with bands of the stripe cut horizontally, together with a short coat having the wide sleeves and a turned-down collar of emerald ery tied with a silk tie.

The wide sleeves are the distinguishing feature of the season, either cut in one with the coat, or put in separately, they appear on every jacket, and, besides these, I would note as a most prominent fancy, tassels. These, small and long, depend from tunics and sleeves, and hoods and corners of capes. Another fancy is the glaze coat made in black and worn with a checked skirt, and again I have noticed a tendency to adopt coat and skirt of different shades of one color, light grey and dark grey, light biscuit and brown being perhaps the most successful of such combinations.

There is no diminution to the favor being accorded to the blouse and skirt both is the last figure in an illustration. This is made of dull blue fine cloth, and trimmed with bands of Chinese embroidery, and it bears many tassels of mixed colors at the corners.

The dress in the center is of cloth with embroidered lawn collar and cuffs, it might be well achieved in dull pink and crowned with a hat to match, and trimmed with a mass of red roses.

The first picture—which I have, in no spirit of contradiction, but by mere accident, kept to the last—is of dull green cloth trimmed with copper and oxidized braid, and I would have it for its best success crowned with a black hat encircled with green and brown ostrich feathers.

I note that, while the short skirt is a recognized favorite, it is never permitted to do duty on festive occasions; for this, the skirts are cut to touch the ground and cling closely round the hips and bear a measure of fullness at the back, a graceful order of affairs.

The Japanese outline remains conspicuous on evening cloaks and traveling cloaks, and tassels are indispen-of the lingerie description, these having been placed within the possibilities of the multitude.

A pretty shape of coat rounds from the front to a tail at the back, and there is much attention being paid to the short jacket which has a seam just above the waist and a kilt to reach this.

The sacques have a very modified fullness, and a little mantle which deserves admiration being, neither exactly a coat, nor yet a domino, but yet possessing virtues belonging to sable decorations to these, which are, however, invested, with complete indifference to tradition, with a distinct waistline, the Japanese effect being mainly retained by the shape of the sleeves.

Fashion, indeed, is a tale of sleeves, and the garments of yesterday may at once be distinguished by these; unless, of course, such garments happen to have been the property of the fortunate few who, by always buying in the most expensive markets, often manage to forestall fashion.

The Unpardonable Sin.

"I can't understand why that young lady boarder is so unpopular. She's a perfect Venus."

"Yes, but she consumes too much time at her Sunday morning bath."

Louisville Courier-Journal.

Restless Nervous

Do you get up in the morning tired, languid, and frequently with headache almost unbearable? You have been unable to rest or sleep. It is nervous exhaustion, and affects the heart, lungs, stomach and all the organs that depend upon the nerves for motive power. What you need is Dr. Miles' Nerve and Brain Tonic. Nerve to restore nervous energy and give new life to the organs.

"For years I have been very nervous, suffered terribly with headache. I had always gone to the doctor, and was about to do so one day to try him for the last time, when a friend advised me to try Dr. Miles' Restorative. I purchased a bottle and the results were so satisfactory I have been taking it ever since. It has helped me wonderfully. Dr. Miles' Nerve and Brain Tonic have done lots of good for me. When I get to feeling nervous now, I go for the Nerve tonic and I am so thankful I have something to help me without a doctor bill."

SERVANT PROBLEM IN CUBA.

Cook is in Sole Charge of the Domestic Cuisine.

The Cuban matron has little to say in the management of her own household, as the family literally board with their cook, who has sole control of the cuisine. When a cook is engaged she is paid so much per month—$10, $15 or $20, as the case may be—for her work. She at once inquires how much is allowed for the marketing, which she is to do each morning. On being told, she figures out how much she can save from the amount, and if the graft amount to say 15 or 20 cents per day, she is likely to accept the position. She rarely sleeps at the house, and usually has a family of her own who are fed from the larder of her employer. Early breakfast is at light—fruit, rolls and coffee—and at noon there is a meal known as late breakfast, which resembles the American luncheon. When this is finished the cook spends a few hours at her home and returns at five o'clock in time to prepare dinner. A half-grown girl is employed to wait on the table, answer the door bell, etc. In some families male cooks are employed. If the meals do not suit the master of the house, he adds more money to the marketing allowance.—Mrs. C. R. Miller, in Leslie's Weekly.

Kindness to Children.

"Do you think child labor is as prevalent as it was?"

"No, indeed. Not half as many children take music lessons as formerly."
